Daily United States Weather Map

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The southwestern storm has moved from Colorado to the lower Mississippi and lower Ohio valleys, causing general snow or rain from the central and southern portions of the Rocky mountain region and the Missouri valley to the south Atlantic coast. It is being followed by the northwestern area of high pressure, with its accompanying cold wave, the crest of the high having advanced to North Dakota and temperatures decidedly below zero prevailing from Manitoba, Saskatchewan and northern Alberta southward to Kansas. It was coldest at 7 a. m. at Harve, Mont., where the reading was 42 degrees below. An area of low pressure and higher temperature is appearing over Alberta. The eastward movement of the southern low and the approach of the northwestern high will be attended by much colder weather in this vicinity tonight and Saturday, with a cold wave tonight. Light snow tonight will be followed by generally fair weather Saturday.

WAGNER'S REVIEW

Morning Grain Letter.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Exceedingly cold weather prevails in the northwest and Canada. Temperatures have touched 20 below in the northwest. More snow has fallen in the central west and average winter conditions prevail. This means increased corn feeding. May corn has sagged to 63 1/2 on the cash demand. Not any rush to sell by bears. All grains promise rallies. Phillips believes his corn reserve guess is bearish, but this opinion is not shared by the conservatives. His figures are not bearish. Export wheat demand in United States is only fair. North American clearances this week will be small at 2,500,000 to 3,000,000. Looks like small Argentine surplus is not bullish. Argentine corn crop news is rosy and its old and new corn continues on offer at the seaboard. Cotton should be near a turning point on this break. Recent attempt to break provisions seems to be defeated by failure of a proper February hog run to date. Packers have ample cellar supplies for balance of year, but their material cost is gaining.

Cash Demand Situation.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—The bear integration mark in corn envelops the 60c level for all months. Why corn should sell permanently below 60c is not clear. It may sell near 60c if these never before witnessed "cash demand" conditions persist.

Corn and oats advances depend entirely on the east. We appear to have waved a farewell to chance of corn export sales for February. Our eastern reports of today show a languishing demand for corn and oats with Canadian oats still cheaper than Americans.

As raw material corn is worth 65c Chicago basis, as a purely economic proposition, disregarding speculative influences. On the certainty that the March corn reserves in the seven surplus states will be 440 to 490,000,000, a trifle.

Considerable plowing has been performed in all sections and a large oats acreage is contemplated. The exact loss in corn export demand to middle west markets Dec. 1 to March 1 can be placed at 20,000,000. A total that would have wiped out Chicago supplies.

Wheat is dependent on Russian influences. Turnups must be expected to end of this month but the foreigner will be most active when our markets sag.

Securities promise fluctuation. Unless steel prices are advanced substantially, profits of the still industry for 1914 will be too small for liberal price accessions. Railroad earnings for the month of December carry little encouragement for speculative commitments on the long side, and some events of an unsettling character are pending.

Heaviness of cotton market is ascribed to presence of 400,000 more United States bales in sight than one year ago and larger uses of foreign cotton by English and continental spinners. Domestic cotton movement into sight has continued "generous." The promenade of provision news since Jan. 1 has favored retention of the average January price level. Lard stocks may appear unwieldy but even lard is supported by the stiff
